Pagsanjan is located 95 kilometers south of Manila. Its river and waterfalls are attractions to the Province of Laguna. Formed many hundreds of years ago, the river was the result of land shake and massive land depression. Skilled boatmen make the way to the falls through difficult river passages of rocks and boulders. Going up on the river takes more time as the boatmen needs to struggle in balancing the boat between rocks in opposing water current. The way back from the waterfalls is more fun, as water gushes down the river, boat drift or glides on the current while boatmen navigates to avoid boulders and rocks. Up the river is Pagsanjan falls, here one can joyride on bamboo raft that goes through a cave behind it.
